

Patricia (Pat) Jeselon

Originally, a westerner from Alberta and BC, I came to Ontario in 1998 to assume a management position under the Chief Information Officer at the Toronto Hospital (now the University Health Network). I relocated from Toronto to Niagara on the Lake two years ago.

In my career, I was a Registered Nurse and a recognized eHealth technology and privacy expert and consultant. I was a Certified Management Consultant and received an MBA from Simon Fraser University, BC. As fate would have it, I was one of the first health practitioners in Canadian healthcare information technology (eHealth) industry. Over several decades, I had the good fortune to lead and participate in local, provincial and national eHealth initiatives and organizations across Canada and to represent Canada on multiple international eHealth organizations and committees.

In addition to chairing eHealth organizations at provincial and national levels, I have also been a past member/chair of home owner and community-based organization boards.

My two daughters have given me four grandsons and soon a great grandchild. I love dogs, gardens and gardening, interior design, art and artists, being outdoors hiking and walking, Lake Ontario (my eastern Pacific Ocean), reading and readers, and..., of course, Niagara on the Lake.
